🔍 In a nutshell

In a few words

Do you picture yourself on stage performing, or behind the scenes designing or directing?

Study

You'll need to decide on the type of course you prefer. Some combine studying the history of theatre and analysing plays with performance skills, while others are much more practical and performance-focused - think acting, musical theatre, costume design and stage management. If you're choosing a performance-based course, expect to attend an audition to showcase those theatrical talents.

What you'll do

Your work with clients could involve:

- encouraging them to talk about emotional or relationship problems
- analysing past events and behaviours so that changes can be made
- assessing their way of thinking and their feelings
- helping them develop new strategies for coping

You could work with adults or children, individually or in groups. You may also be involved in training non-client groups like social workers.

There are different types of psychotherapy, like cognitive behavioural therapy, humanistic therapy, or hypnotherapy. There are also different areas of life you can specialise in, like couples therapy, sex therapy, or family counseling. The approach you use will depend on your specialism and your clients' needs.
